Dear Students, Parents, and Faculty.

Education is not the learning of facts, but the training of the mind to think

As we embrace the transformative spirit of NEP 2020, our institute is evolving into a hub where holistic development meets technical excellence. This year has been a landmark journey of "learning by doing," bridging the gap between traditional wisdom and modern advancement. We are immensely proud to have hosted Vareniam, our inaugural first tech fest under the ISTE banner, which challenged our students to solve real-world problems through engineering.

From the adrenaline of Shaurya Sports Week to the vibrant echoes of Gunj 2025, our campus has vibrated with energy and talent. In this era, technology is not just a tool but the very fabric of our evolution; it is the "digital nervous system" that connects human intent to global impact. True technical education means mastering the art of algorithmic efficiency while maintaining a 100% commitment to ethical values.

As we move forward, let us continue to innovate with purpose and lead with integrity.

Mr. Jignesh M. Joshi

Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat

The academic year 2025 has been a remarkable journey for Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat—a year where learning extended beyond classrooms, values met action, and students embraced both knowledge and responsibility

The academic year 2025 has been a remarkable journey for Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat—a year where learning extended beyond classrooms, values met action, and students embraced both knowledge and responsibility.

Through a range of academic, cultural, and outreach initiatives, our students engaged with society, history, and the environment in meaningful ways. National observances and commemorative campaigns such as Republic Day, Independence Day, Har Ghar Tiranga, and Viksit Bharat Saptah deepened their understanding of India's heritage, democratic ideals, and civic duty. In reflecting on this spirit of growth and potential, we are reminded that:

"We know what we are, but know not what we may be."* – William Shakespeare

This timeless insight resonates with the ethos of our students, who continually explore and expand the horizons of their knowledge, character, and abilities.

Co-curricular and cultural activities—including Shaurya – Sports Week, quizzes, competitions, and artistic events—fostered creativity, teamwork, and leadership, creating a vibrant and inclusive campus life. Industrial visits, workshops, and innovation-driven programmes provided practical insights and professional confidence. In all these endeavors, the principle of mindful effort over attachment to results guided our students:

“कर्मण्येवाधिकारस्ते मा फलेषु कदाचन।
मा कर्मफलहेतुर्भूर्मा ते सङ्गोऽस्त्वकर्मणि॥” – Bhagavad Gita

This teaching encouraged students to focus on learning, service, and action itself, cultivating diligence, resilience, and ethical responsibility. Our dedicated faculty further enriched this ecosystem through research, professional development, and interdisciplinary learning, while wellness and mentorship initiatives ensured students' holistic growth. As this e-Newsletter captures these moments of engagement and achievement, it reminds us to embrace our experiences fully and with reflection:

"Fill your paper with the breathings of your heart."* – William Wordsworth

The words aptly convey the enthusiasm, creativity, and heartfelt effort that our students and faculty bring to every activity and initiative.

This collection of experiences illustrates a campus where competence, character, and community converge—preparing young women not just for professional success, but for meaningful participation in society and nation-building.

Visit2: : Inoweave Dijitex

- Date of Visit: 25 September 2025
- Industry / Place Visited: Inoweave Dijitex
- Participants: EC – 4th Semester Students (Joint visit with ICT)
- Learning Outcomes:
 - Understanding digital textile machinery and automation
 - Exposure to embedded systems and industrial electronics
 - Familiarization with modern manufacturing environments

Visit 3: Sarita Sagar Sankul

- Date of Visit: 27 November 2025
- Industry / Place Visited: Sarita Sagar Sankul
- Participants: EC – 2nd Semester Students (Joint visit with ICT)
- Learning Outcomes:
 - Orientation towards industrial and institutional work culture
 - Basic understanding of infrastructure and technological integration
 - Early-stage industry exposure and motivation

Industrial Visits Organized by Electrical Engineering (EE) Department

The Electrical Engineering department organized a series of industrial visits aimed at providing students with hands-on exposure to power generation, transmission, substations, electrical machines, and lighting industries. These visits significantly strengthened students' conceptual understanding of core electrical engineering subjects.

Visit 1: 220 kV Ichhapore Substation

- Date of Visit: 14 August 2025
- Participants: 3rd and 5th Semester Students
- Learning Outcomes:
 - For 5th Semester Students:
 - Understanding of EHV substation layout
 - Knowledge of protection systems, control panels, safety practices, and major substation equipment
 - For 3rd Semester Students:
 - Understanding of various accessories and components of three-phase transformers

Visit 2: Utran Gas Based Power Plant

- Date of Visit: 30 August 2025
- Participants: Electrical Engineering Students
- Learning Outcome:
 - Exposure to gas-based power generation processes
 - Understanding of auxiliary systems and power plant operations
 - Practical insight into energy conversion and efficiency aspects

Visit 3: Ukai Thermal Power Station & Ukai Hydro Power Station

- Date of Visit: 04 September 2025
- Participants: 3rd and 5th Semester Students
- Learning Outcome:
 - Comparative study of thermal and hydro power generation
 - Understanding turbine operation, generators, and grid integration
 - Observation of large-scale power generation and control mechanisms

Visit 4: Happy Engineering & Tirich LED Manufacturing Unit

- Date of Visit: 11 April 2025
- Industry / Place Visited:
 - Happy Engineering – Induction Motor Manufacturing Unit
 - Tirich LED – LED Manufacturing Unit
- Learning Outcome:
 - Practical exposure to induction motor manufacturing processes
 - Understanding of electrical machine construction and testing
 - Insight into LED manufacturing, lighting technology, and industrial standards
 - Correlation of theoretical concepts with real industrial practices

The industrial visits organized by the EC, ICT, and EE departments:

- Enhanced students' practical knowledge and technical confidence
- Helped students relate theoretical concepts to real-world applications
- Provided exposure to modern industrial technologies and professional work culture
- Encouraged industry-oriented thinking and career awareness

The industrial visits conducted during the academic year 2025 successfully met their objectives of experiential learning and industry exposure. Active participation by students and well-structured planning by the EC, ICT, and EE departments ensured meaningful learning outcomes. Such visits play a crucial role in holistic technical education and should be continued and expanded in future academic years.

Induction Program: Induction program was successfully organized and students from every department participated in a big number. The focus of the program was the holistic growth of the students and they thoroughly enjoyed it and learning while enjoying made the program fun for them.

NTF: As part of the institutional initiative to promote student wellbeing and holistic development, Seminar No. 1 of the Seminar Series was organized on the theme “Holistic Wellness Seminar: How to Manage Stress and Anxiety in Students.” The seminar was conducted on 22 December, 2025 at Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat, and was organized by the National Task Force Committee, Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat. The programme witnessed the enthusiastic participation of 122 students, reflecting the growing awareness and concern regarding mental health and wellness among the student community.

The seminar aimed to address stress and anxiety as significant challenges faced by students in contemporary academic and social environments. The session was facilitated by Dr. Vaishali S Biradar, a distinguished resource person with expertise in holistic wellness and mental health. Through an engaging and insightful approach, the expert emphasized the importance of adopting a balanced lifestyle to enhance overall wellbeing.

FACULTY NAME: MR. ROSHAN ROHIT
DEPARTMENT: INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

Book Name: "The Wealth Money Can't Buy"

Author: Robin Sharma

Book Reviewed by: Roshan Rohit , Lecturer , DIT, Government Polytechnic for Girls, Surat

This life-changing book highlights how real wealth goes beyond money and material possessions. It's about nurturing health, meaningful relationships, and your inner peace.

Key Takeaways:

- 💡 Time is the ultimate currency – invest it in experiences and people who truly matter.
- 💡 True wealth = Inner peace + Health + Relationships, not material possessions.
- 💡 Fulfillment comes from alignment with your values, not chasing societal definitions of success.

Personal Review:

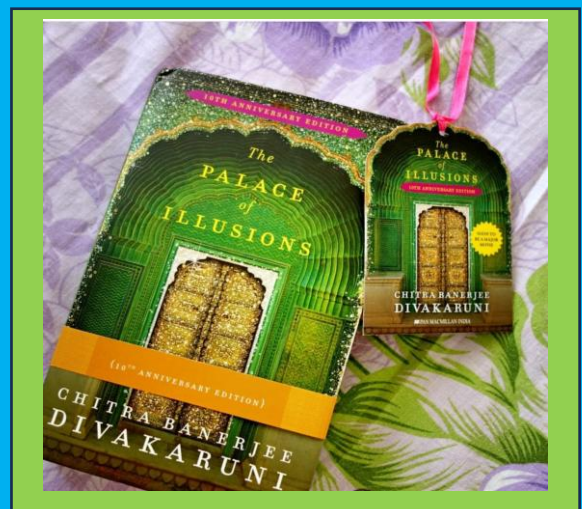

This book profoundly shifted my perspective on success. It's a must-read for anyone seeking clarity, purpose, and the courage to focus on what truly matters. Robin Sharma's words will inspire you to redefine wealth and success on your terms.

The Palace of Illusions* by Chitra Banerjee Divakaruni

- Dr. Vaishali S Biradar

Chitra Banerjee Divakaruni's The Palace of Illusions (2008) offers a significant reinterpretation of the Mahabharata by retelling the epic through the voice of Draupadi, one of its most complex female figures. Rather than presenting Draupadi as a marginal presence shaped by male heroism and destiny, Divakaruni places her at the centre of the narrative, allowing her to articulate her own experiences, conflicts, and reflections. The novel thus functions not only as a literary retelling of an ancient epic but also as a sustained meditation on gender, power, and women's agency within patriarchal social structures.

At its core, The Palace of Illusions challenges the male-dominated narrative tradition of the Mahabharata. In most classical versions, Draupadi is remembered primarily for her beauty, her polyandrous marriage, and the humiliation she suffers in the Kaurava court. Divakaruni revises this limited representation by transforming Draupadi into a self-conscious narrator who actively questions the forces that shape her life. This narrative shift is crucial, as it allows Draupadi to emerge not merely as a symbolic figure but as a woman with emotional depth, moral awareness, and intellectual independence.

One of the novel's most striking achievements lies in its portrayal of Draupadi's inner life. From her childhood, she is shown to be acutely aware of the constraints imposed upon her as a woman. She is curious, observant, and dissatisfied with the narrow roles prescribed for her. Her education, emotional intelligence, and desire to understand political power mark her as distinct from the traditional epic ideal of silent femininity. In presenting Draupadi as a reflective and questioning subject, Divakaruni emphasizes that empowerment begins with awareness—the ability to recognize injustice and articulate one's sense of self, even when external circumstances remain restrictive.

Marriage, a central institution in Draupadi's life, is depicted not as a source of fulfillment but as a site of negotiation and emotional struggle. Her marriage to the five Pandava brothers, often explained through divine or cultural justification in the epic, is presented here in human terms. Draupadi experiences loneliness, emotional neglect, and a lack of personal choice, despite her status as a queen. Divakaruni's treatment of this relationship exposes the patriarchal logic that prioritizes social duty and male honor over women's emotional needs. Yet Draupadi is not portrayed as submissive; she asserts her dignity, expresses dissatisfaction, and resists the erasure of her individuality within marriage. This portrayal resonates strongly with contemporary women's experiences, where empowerment often involves asserting selfhood within limiting social frameworks.

The episode of the dice game and Draupadi's public humiliation forms the moral centre of the novel. Divakaruni does not merely recount this event as an inevitable turning point toward war; instead, she foregrounds Draupadi's response to injustice. Her questions in the royal court—regarding legality, ownership, and moral responsibility—represent an act of intellectual resistance. Even in a position of extreme vulnerability, Draupadi refuses to accept humiliation as destiny. This moment redefines empowerment not as physical power but as moral clarity and the courage to speak against injustice. Draupadi's refusal to internalize shame becomes one of the novel's most powerful feminist assertions.

Equally significant is Divakaruni's portrayal of Draupadi's desires and emotional contradictions. Her unfulfilled attraction toward Karna is handled with sensitivity and restraint, without reducing her character to moral binaries. By acknowledging female desire as a legitimate emotional experience, the novel challenges traditional representations that deny women complexity and agency. Draupadi is neither idealized nor condemned; she is presented as fully human, shaped by longing, regret, pride, and reflection. This refusal to simplify her character strengthens the novel's feminist vision, as empowerment here is linked to authenticity rather than moral perfection.

The Palace of Illusions gains further relevance when read in the context of contemporary discussions on women's empowerment. Draupadi's struggle against silence, objectification, and injustice mirrors the experiences of women across historical and cultural contexts. The novel suggests that empowerment is not always about changing one's circumstances immediately but about reclaiming one's voice, asserting dignity, and refusing erasure. By rewriting an ancient epic from a woman's perspective, Divakaruni demonstrates how traditional narratives can be re-examined to recover suppressed voices and alternative histories.

In conclusion, The Palace of Illusions stands as a compelling feminist reinterpretation of the Mahabharata. Through Draupadi's voice, Divakaruni interrogates patriarchal authority, redefines heroism, and foregrounds women's emotional and intellectual agency. The novel does not offer easy resolutions; instead, it presents empowerment as an ongoing process shaped by resistance, self-awareness, and moral courage. As a literary work, it bridges myth and modernity, and as a cultural text, it offers enduring insights into the struggles and strengths of women negotiating power, identity, and justice.

HASTI GARNARA

Everywhere humans go, shadows follow. They follow so faithfully that most people never ask why. But one girl did. Her name was Rhea.

Rhea loved to sit by her window, watching her shadow shift across the wall. Sometimes it stretched tall and thin, sometimes short and wide. Sometimes it even looked like someone else entirely. One evening, she asked aloud: "Shadow, who are you really?"

For a long time, the shadow said nothing. Then, when the room grew quiet and the last ray of sunlight touched the floor, a soft voice whispered: "I am what you cannot see."

Rhea shivered. "What do you mean?"

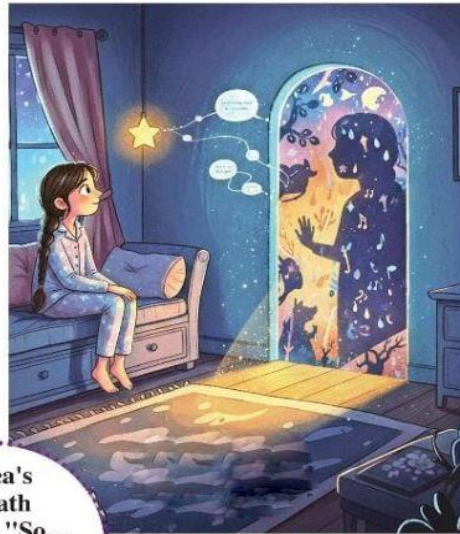

The shadow moved without her. It leaned forward while she stayed still. "You believe I am only your copy. But what if you are the copy? What if the world you know is only half of the picture, and the other half lives where I stand?"

Rhea's heart raced. "Another world?"

The shadow nodded. "Yes. You see with your eyes, but you never trust them. Your brain twists the picture, changes it, tells you what to believe. But your eyes-your eyes know the truth. They see the real world, the one you are not allowed to remember. We are part of that world."

Rhea's breath caught. "So... shadows come from that hidden world?"

The shadow's voice

Rhea's breath caught. "So... shadows come from that hidden world?"

lowered. "We are not just your silhouettes. We are the shapes your brain refuses to show you. The side of reality you are not ready to face. When you laugh, we hear the silence inside it. When you cry, we keep the tears your brain makes you forget."

The room grew darker. Her shadow melted into the wall until it looked more like a doorway than a shape.

"Will I ever see your world?" she whispered.

"Perhaps," the shadow replied. "When the last light fades, and your eyes finally slip free from your brain's prison, then you will see the real world. Until then, remember: you are never only what you think you are. There is always another side."

And as the darkness swallowed the room completely, Rhea realized something that would never leave her:

Her shadow was not just following her. It was waiting.

Just remember that your eyes know the truth, but your brain won't always let you see it. And that's true, even if this is just a story. ■

"What if you are the copy, not the original? What if the world you know is only half of the picture, and the other half lives where I stand?"

This is the story that got published in Zagmag magazine, a supplementary of Gujarat Samachar newspaper. [Publication date is Saturday, 15 November 2025]

Bhagwan Birsa Munda Nu Jivan chaita 1st Rank

"Some Heroes are not born to rule - they are born to inspire their people"

→ Bhagwan Birsa Munda was a great Freedom Fighter, tribal leader, and a true hero of India. He was born on 15th November 1857 in Ulihatu village (present days Jharkhand). He dedicated his short yet powerful life for the tribal people's upliftment and to fight against the British. Even today, people remember him as "Dharti Aaba" means Father of the earth.

→ Birsa Belonged to the Munda tribe and grew up seeing the struggles of his peoples. The British and the landlords had taken away their land and imposed heavy taxes on them. This injustice has deeply affected Birsa Munda.

"He was not just the son of the forest -
He became it's voice of freedom"

→ He studied in a german mission school, where he learned about the outside world, but he never forgot about his roots, values, culture and most importantly his people's pain.

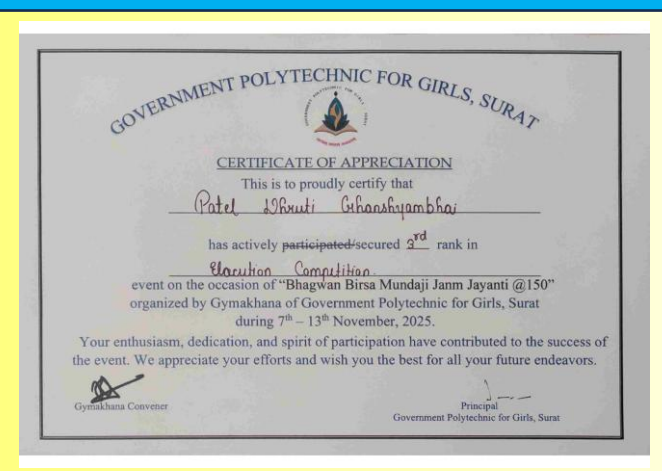

→ We celebrate 09th August as "Vishan Adivasi divas" and remember him.

→ Bhagwan Birsa Munda's life teaches us the meaning of bravery, sacrifice and love for one's land. His message of unity and self respect continues to guide and inspire generations.

→ Though his life was short but it left behind a light of pride and courage that still guides India today.

"Birsa Munda didn't just fought for land - he fought for dignity, identity and freedom".

→ He will forever be remember as a warrior, a saint and the heartbeat of his people. And to remember him we celebrate November, 15 his birth anniversary as (Tribal pride day).
